Committee Gives "Do Pass" Sign on School Fund Allocation

Bill to Aid Schools Goes to Assembly

The Educational Committee of the California General Assembly has released a bill to the legislature with a "Do Pass" recommendation providing:

1—That all of the bond money be released to the schools as fast as possible;

2—That partial allocations be made to schools immediately, that they may proceed with building programs; and

3—That additional apportionments be made to care for increased costs over those of the time the original estimates were made.

Supt. Byron Netzley of Lemon Grove, together with Glen Murdock of the La Mesa-Spring Valley Schools, Elmer Walker of Lakeside and Harold Hughes of Grossmont High School, attended the meetings in Sacramento yesterday and today, conferring with members of the Educational Committee.

Assemblywoman Katherine Neihouse lent her aid to the furthering of the bill and worked diligently among the legislators to get the bill onto the floor of the Assembly.

Assemblymen Cloyed and Luckel also played a part in the work and San Diego county friends of the school bill appreciate the work already accomplished since the legislature convened Wednesday noon.

The bill is now in the Assembly awaiting passage, after which it will go to the Senate, where it is hoped speedy action will place it on the Governor's desk for final signing, so that the hard pressed school districts, such as Lemon Grove can immediately start work on additional school rooms.

The Lemon Grove School District has a site on San Miguel where a new school is to be constructed just as soon as the money is made available.

Lecturer Explains Bible Prophecy

"World peace for the righteous; Atomic pieces for the wicked will be the outcome of the present crisis hour," declared Bible Lecturer Charles H. Betz, here last Sunday evening at the Prophecy lecture now being held in the Seventh-day Adventist Church.

"The prediction made 75 years ago by the wise men of that time, that the twentieth century would be one where 'war is dead, ... hatred is dead . . . . and man will be alive,' have utterly failed. The predictions made today by many leaders that this earth will become depopulated, and that 'rats will someday rule this world, and be the super men of tomorrow' will likewise fail.

"Jesus Christ will over-rule human plans for peace, and 'create a new heaven and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness, and the meek shall inherit the earth and delight themselves in the abundance of peace.'

"Those who reject Christ's invitation to prepare themselves for this new world will be left out and destroyed by fire. The bacteria of sin, the virus of selfishness will utterly be destroyed and will not rise again," said Evangelist Betz.

Coming topics of thrilling interest Tuesday, Sept. 26: "Are Other Worlds Inhabited?" Wednesday, Sept. 27: "Bridge to Paradise" and Friday, Sept. 29: Special Youth night featuring a Round Table discussion of Bible Prophecy.

Everyone is welcome.

Netzley Attends Youth Conference

At the invitation of Governor Earl Warren, Supt. B. L. Netzley attended the California Mid-century Conference on Children and Youth at Sacramento on Monday and Tuesday. This working conference of State leaders in the youth welfare field is held to assess the problems, needs and opportunities of California youth, and to review the findings and recommendations submitted by the Youth Committee. They have been gathering factual material about our child welfare problems on which to base recommendations to be presented to the White House Conference.

The Board of Trustees authorized Mr. Netzley to attend not only the Governor's Conference at Memorial Auditorium, but also to remain in Sacramento for the special session of the Legislature. This session has a dual purpose: (1) to provide for adequate civilian defense and (2) to correct inadequacies of the present bill dealing with school allocations. By his presence in Sacramento during this week, Mr. Netzley will keep the local legislators informed of the Lemon Grove District's needs and will keep the local building program before the eyes of the entire legislature.

S. K. Solleder, director of education, also received an invitation from Governor Warren to attend the Conference, but due to the opening of the fall semester, he was unable to accompany Mr. Netzley to Sacramento. Mr. Solleder is Elementary Rrepresentative of the San Diego County School Administrators Association.

Comparison of School Time

Many questions and comments have come to the Review concerning the length of the school day on the double session program. The delay in state funds has caused a continuation and extension of the double session program in the California Public schools. In the interest of getting information to the parents we are publishing the actual teaching time on the regular session in public schools and the double session.

First the double session is not a half-day program. Children attend classes nearly as long on a double session as they would on a single session. The double session is accomplished by running two sessions, one starting early in the morning and one starting in the early afternoon and ending late in the afternoon. Following is a schedule of the minutes class is in session in various schools, both on the regular session and on the double session. A brief study of this schedule will show two things; first, that the double session is not a half-day session, and second, that the difference in teaching time between double session and regular session is not as great as is generally thought:

Postmasters are Government's Representative

Harry B. Mitchell, Chairman of the United States Civil Service Commission, has called upon the American public to recognize that postmasters are permanent officers under the Civil Service System, and entitled to all rights and privileges of the law.

Chairman Mitchell's statement was issued as a part of a nation-wide campaign launched by the National Association of Postmasters to educate the public as to the true status of postmasters in the Civil Service System. Too many people, the Association announced, believe that postmasters are temporary political appointees and it is resulting in an incorrect attitude toward the Postal Service.

In a public statement Chairman Mitchell announced: "Every

Work Starts on New Fire Station

Work is to start immediately converting the Baptist Church Educational Unit on Central avenue into a fire station for the Lemon Grove Fire Protection District.

The district is buying the building for a consideration of approximately $9,000, after it is converted to a fire station.

The church is asking volunteer help in getting the building in readiness to be turned over to the district in time to house the first of the two recently purchased fire trucks, when the equipment arrives sometime in December.

Chris Ferguson is in charge of the construction, assisted by Ray Carmody of the Church Board, and any persons who are willing to donate time to the project are asked to contact either Mr. Ferguson or Mr. Carmody.

An apparatus room is to be added to the building on the present patio side of the structure, and the existing rooms are to be converted into sleeping rooms and lockers.

A vertical drying rack will be erected at the rear of the building to dry the hose following its use at a fire.

The building is to be turned over to the district completely remodeled according to specifications of the fire commissioners.

Political Parade

CLEM WHITAKER, Jr.

The science of politics is a far cry from that of mathematics but victory starved Republicans all over the Nation have calculated the November congressional elections from every angle, slide rules and all, and say that success is in sight—it's mathematically probable!

The GOP computations are based on the fact that they will have to pick up seven seats in the Senate to win control of that body and that 47 seats are needed to take over in the House. Presently the Republicans have 42 Senate seats, the Democrats 54. A majority is 49.

After feeding carefully compiled Nation-wide facts and figures into their calculator, the Republicans state that there are 11 doubtful Senate seats from which to win the seven they need for victory. The doubtful States are California, Illnois, Maryland, New York, Pennsylvania, Oklahoma, Idaho, Washington, Utah and Connecticut. Connecticut has two seats at stake.

Over in the House of Representatives, the program is larger in scope. In the House, 75 elections in 23 states, the GOP claims, will decide the issue. Currently, the Democrats have 261 seats, the Republicans 171, one is held by the American Labor Party and one by a Democrat-Liberal. It takes 218 seats for a majority. By Republican arithmetic, the GOP needs to win 47 of the critical 75 seats to win control.

Looked upon as certain to be wrested from the Democrats, by the Republicans, are Senate seats now held down by Downey, Democrat of California, Taylor, Democrat of Idaho, Thomas, Democrat of Utah, Lucas, Democrat of Illinois, Benton, Democrat of Connecticut, McMahon, Democrat of Connecticut, and Myever, Democrat of Pennsylvania. That's the magic seven.

In the other four doubtful contests, the Republicans profess to see possibilities — although not certain victory. These seats are held by Magnuson, Democrat of Washington, Tydings, Democrat of Maryland, Thomas, Democrat of Oklahoma and Lehman, Democrat of New York.

To all this, Democrats reply there's many a slip between the calculator and the ballot box. Certainly, they concede, the Republican addition and subtraction is pretty sound. (Privately they admit it could be very sound.) But the Bourbons happily counter that the election is not tomorrow—"Harry was in trouble, too, and he won, didn't he?"

Taking the public utterances of both parties with a grain of salt, most politicos estimate that the Republicans might be a bit too optomistic—though the GOP does stand a real chance of winning control over both houses of Congress. What it adds up to, as in every election, is that you can't "win" until the votes are counted — and that candidates that stop campaigning before election day are more than likely to be rudely surprised.

JAMES DORAIS

Of all issues on the coming November ballot, the one likely to create the greatest controversy is State Proposition 10, requiring a vote by the people of the community when a subsidized, low-rent, public housing project is proposed by the city or county Housing Authority.

In the Antioch Ledger last week, a columnist writing for that newspaper raised an earnest and interesting question concerning the need for the measure.

"There is a grave responsibility," the columnist pointed out, "upon the Authority and the public officials to see that such (public housing) undertaking does not become an exploitation, and there is nothing in the past that need cause any question of confidence in what has been done. When such officials fail to guard the public that would be the time to propose the law (Proposition 10) that this matter be put to an election."

Proponents of Proposition 10 would contend that the need for its enactment has been amply demonstrated on the columnist's own terms.

In the specific case of Antioch, the actions of Housing Authority bureaucrats may not have caused any question of confidence. But in far too many other cases, they have. It is precisely because such officials have failed to guard the public in California community after community that Proposition 10 has been proposed.

When the City Council of Eureka accepted Housing Authority recommendations for construction of a subsidized housing project, Eurekans opposed to the project quickly obtained the required number of voter-signatures to refer their action to a vote of the people. But Eureka city officials refused to accept the petitions and the State Supreme Court ruled that because of a loophole in the law, public housing is non-referendable.

In spite of widespread public opposition, the Oakland Housing Authority secured approval from that city's Council for a subsidized public housing program. So unhappy were the citizens of Oakland with their Council's action that one of the councilmen was subsequently ousted at a recall election. Yet plans for the project's construction are still going forward, in spite of the clearly expressed mandate of the voters against it.

Modesto citizens protested a subsidized public housing program proposed by the Housing Authority in Stanislaus County time after time at Supervisors meetings. They had every reason to believe that the program would be dropped, yet last month the Board quietly yielded to the pressure of the Authority bureaucrats and other public housing advocates. There is nothing that the people of Modesto can do about it. The right of referendum is denied them, recall is pointless.

The only redress available to the people of Modesto and all other California communities is to insist on, through Proposition 10, the same right to vote on public housing that citizens enjoy in the case of school bonds, transit systems and all other projects involving long term community debt.

Douglas Voting Record Cited

Helen Douglas' record "disqualifies her from representing the people of California in the United States Senate."

That was the declaration of Congressman Richard Nixon as he launched his senatorial campaign at meetings in San Diego, Los Angeles, Fresno and San Francisco.

With the fate of our way of life in the balance, Congressman Nixon declared, there is one paramount issue and that is, what policy shall we adopt to stop Communist aggression and to assure for the future a chance for a free people to live in a peaceful world.

It is because of the gravity of this issue, the senatorial nominee stated, that he feels he has an obligation to expose Mrs. Douglas' record so that the voters of California can decide whether they want her to speak for them in the United States Senate, where the nation's foreign policy is made.

"The only opportunity the people of California have to express their views on this vital basic issue," Nixon declared, "is through the two United States senators who represent them in Washington. During the past five years California has been fortunate to be represented in the Senate by two men who have fearlessly taken a strong stand against Communist aggression at home and abroad. Senator Downey is retiring after two years of service to his state and nation."

Taking cognizance of the fact that his opponent is a woman and that he had been advised not to criticize her, Nixon stated, "but she is also asking the people of California to send her as their representative to the United States Senate, where she could make decisions affecting their very lives."

"I want my position to be crystal clear," he continued. "There will be no name calling, no smears, no misrepresentation. We do not indulge in such tactics. But I do say here and now that to the extent that Mrs. Douglas does not reveal, or conceals, her record, I feel I have an obligation to expose that record to the voters of California so they can decide whether they want her to speak for them in the United States Senate."

Congressman Nixon then stated three essential qualifications "that a United States Senator should have during this critical period." These, he declared, are " a real understanding of the international Communist conspiracy at home and abroad, the experience and background which are essential for the development of a strong and consistent foreign policy, an understanding of national defense problems.

Then Congressman Nixon said, "Let's look at the record of Mrs. Douglas and see how it stacks up on these three vital issues." In a speech in the Congress on March 29, 1946, he declared, Mrs. Douglas said, "I think we all know that Communism is no real threat to the democratic institutions of our country."

"We have only to look at her votes" Nixon continued, "to see she meant exactly what she said. Next to Vito Marcantonio, who admittedly follows the Communist line in the House of Representatives, Mrs. Douglas has probably been the most outspoken and vocal critic of the House Committee on Un-American Activities."

To further establish his point, Nixon cited Mrs. Douglas, votes against the committee and against contempt citations for witnesses who defied Congress by refusing to answer whether they were Communists.

"If she had her way," Nixon declared, "the Communist conspiracy in the United States would never have been exposed and instead of being a convicted perjurer, Alger Hiss would still be influencing the foreign policy of the United States."

He recalled that Mrs. Douglas had opposed legislation requiring loyalty checks for federal employees, even after the Korean war had began, as well as investigations of the purchase of 60,000 secret patents by Soviet Russia and the whitewash of the Amerasia case, which involved the theft of vital government documents.

MANAGEMENT AND DRUGS VS. COCCIDIOSIS

Good management remains the first and best control for coccidiosis in chickens, but in cases of severe outbreaks, certain drugs can help. So reports Farm Advisor Robert Adolph, of the University of California Agricultural Extension Service.

Under good mannagement comes daily clean-ups of poultry buildings during outbreaks of the diseasee. Wire platforms under troughs, water fountains, and brooders help to reduce the danger of the birds' eating an overdose of infective oocysts, which cause the disease. Those poultrymen using deep built-up litter in the brooder and growing houses will need to keep the litter dry to retard the disease build-up. Stimulating the appetites of the birds also helps the chickens to recover.

Certain drugs such as sulfaguanide, sulfamerazine, sulfamethazine, sulfaquinoxaline and nitrophenide used correctly help to control the disease. Some of these if provided as directed may help in preventing the disease in growing chicks.

More information about coccidiosis control can be secured from your farm advisor at 4005 Rosecrans street, San Diego 10. Telephone Woodcrest 3186.

FEEDING MILK GOATS

A simple and concise method of arriving at satisfactory concentrate mixtures for milk goats is the subject of an Agricultural Extension Service leaflet just revised by the authors, Professor W. M. Regan, of the Animal Husbandry Division, and G. E. Gordon, Extension Dairyman of the Uninversity of California.

The leaflet not only deals with the economy of rations for milk goats, but lists concentrate mixtures designed to supplement the various roughages.

A new table giving the nutritive values of common California concentrates and the comparative costs of total digestible nutrients has been added.

Copies of the leaflet are available from the Agricultural Extension Service, 4005 Rosecrans street. Telephone Woodcrest 3186.

FALL IRRIGATION OF AVOCADOS

That avocado growers give some special thought to irrigation these fall months is the suggestion of Farm Advior Joe Coony. San Diego County orchards in general looked their best in recent years during the July and August just passed. How soon, and to what degree changes take place, such as tipburn, poorer color, old-looking leaves, can be affected by irrigation practice.

Many growers have observed better results from more frequent applications of water. This practice looks good in view of the salt content of our irrigation waters and the resultant accumulations in the soil. With these conditions, allowing the soil to get just a little on the dry side can produce adverse results—quickly.

Actually, the leaves have been accumulating chloride salt all year. The older leaves are pretty well loaded, so to speak. A moisture stress at this time can burn the tips and margins of the leaves. Dry, windy weather may increase the degree of leaf burning, in spite of good soil moisture.

This is not the year, sums up Coony, to taper off irrigation in anticipation of winter rains. Some of our severest weather: dry, windy, may be ahead. Considering the salt, rainfall can do a better job of leeching if the soil has good moisture in it at the time.

postmaster not only has to qualify for appointment through an examination given by the Civil Service Commission, but he must he must be among the three top eligibles. Like other Federal workers, the postmaster serves without limitation on his term, subject only to the same competent handling of his office as required of all personnel.

"The country benefited when postmasters were placed under competitive civil service. The postmaster and his employees are the most important daily contact a citizen has with his government. I am glad to know that the National Association of Postmasters is launching a campaign to inform the American public as to the real facts. The United States Civil Service Commission is particularly gratified at the manner in which postmasters are performing their duties.

The Association has established a national committee to conduct the campaign with Fergus McHee, Postmaster, Richmond, Va., as chairman. Top officials in Government and in both major parties have joined in expressing approval of the program the sole aim of which is to correct the oft-repeated statements that postmasters are serving only upon a temporary basis, whereas the law of the land has placed them as a vital part of the Civil Service System.

Mrs. Leo Ehm, 7980 Mt. Vernon, has returned from a two weeks' visit with her mother near Portland, Oregon.

"On three different occasions," Nixon charged, she voted "against the subversive control bill, which would require Communists to register with the Attorney General. I say that at a time when millions of young Americans are being required to register for the draft to fight Communists abroad, the least we can do is require Communists to register in the United States."

Turning to Mrs. Douglas' record in the field of foreign policy, Congressman Nixon recalled that "Mrs. Douglas joined with a small clique of left-wingers and isolationists in opposing the Truman Doctrine, a program that was responsible for keeping Greece and Turkey from being overwhelmed by Soviet power."

"On three separate occasions," he added, "she voted against amendments to foreign relief bills which would have denied funds to Soviet-dominated countries, unless representatives of the American press were allowed to enter these countries and let the world know whether the funds were actually going to those who needed them.

"During the six years she has been in Congress, she has consistently opposed aid to anti-Communinst forces in China and Formosa, has consistently supported the State Department's appeasing Communism in Asia, which finally resulted in the Korean War."

Mrs. Douglas' "lack of understanding of national defense problems," Congressman Nixon stated, "is shown by her vote against the Selective Service Act of 1948. If she had had her way, our troops in Korea would have been even less prepared than they were. At that time she defended her vote on the theory that in this atomic age the foot soldier was obsolete. I wonder what the men fighting in the mud and blood of Korea today would say to that?"

In discussing future foreign policy, Nixon stated, "I join with General MacArthur in his position that we cannot let Formosa fall into the hands of Communists." He expressed opposition "to the admission of Communinst China to the United Nations," and at the same time declared that he advocates a program which will assure complete victory in Korea and the power to meet similar threats in other parts of the world."

"We recognize," Nixon continued, "that the United States cannot by itself assume the military responsibility of policing the world. That is why I shall support in the Uninted States Senate every possible move that can be made to strengthen the United Nations and to establish an international police force which will be constantly in readiness to move at a moment's notice against such outbreaks as that in Korea.

We cannot afford," Congressman Nixon concluded, " to take the risk of placing anyone in our top councils who has demonstrated in the past, before Korea, or since Korea, that they at the very least have a tendency toward weakening in the face of our enemy.
